THE PROCESS OF MAKING PORCELAIN & CERAMIC TILE

www.siyatone.com

1

The Magic Begins

Water and raw materials are mixed until a sand-like consistency is reached. Recipes vary slightly, resulting in variations in color, texture, or other characteristics of the tiles. The raw materials used typically include feldspar, clay, silica sand, and other additives.

Getting the Perfect Consistency

In this next step, a spray dryer is used to remove excess moisture from the mixture until the perfect consistency is achieved. A spray dryer is a specialized equipment that utilizes hot air to evaporate the water, leaving behind a well-balanced mixture ready for the next stage.

Creating the Tile Body

Now, the porcelain and ceramic mixtures are pressed to form the tile bodies. Each type of tile uses a specially designed punch to shape and form the body, known as Greenware. Porcelain tile and ceramic tile have slightly different compositions, with porcelain being denser and more refined.

Curing Begins

Water and raw materials are mixed until a sand-like consistency is reached. Recipes vary slightly, resulting in variations in color, texture, or other characteristics of the tiles. The raw materials used typically include feldspar, clay, silica sand, and other additives.

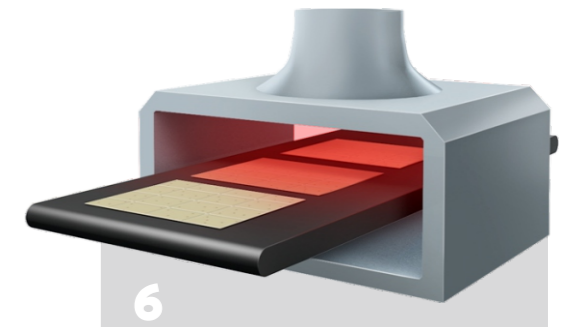

The combined production capacities of the Siyatone Group highlight its strong presence in the ceramic industry:
